The fact that today this remedy is more widely ded, by grateful people in every walk of life than all the other remedles in the world together, is not astonishing. It makes people well! There have appeared recently published testi-monials of Mr. Carlisle's private secretary, of ex-Minister to Austria Francis, of Mayor McShane of Montreal, of Miss Mabel Jenness, of President Cook of the National Teachers' Association, of Gen. Macauley and of scores of other equally women and men. The "plain people" by thousands in every state in the Union have testi-fed to the merits of the compound. Hon. Addison B. Colvin, whose likeness is give above, who was elected treasurer of New York state last fall, was born in 1858 in Glens Falls, N. Y., where he was educated in the public schools, and where he has since resided. His successful career is known to all well-informed persons.

Writing to the proprietors of Palne's celery com-pound on July 12 last he said: "I beg to advise you that three or four years ago, when I was suffering severely with a nervous difficulty, caused by too close attention to business, I took several bottles of Palue's celery compound.

what "regulating and strengthening the nerves" really means. No parts of the body undergo such rapid changes and nerves demand the promptest repair possible. The proper material must be speedily and richly brought by the blood to insure the healthy working of these delicate parts. It is when the vigor of the body is so reduced that the pervous tis sues cannot extract these needed elements from the blood, and when the pale, watery blood can furnish but a scanty supply of building material, that the strength fails, sleep becomes broken and unrefreshing, depression seizes the mind and a general feeling of ill-being is the sure forerunner of the breakdown of some special organ, liver, kidneys, heart, brain or stomach. Paine's celery compound regulates and strengthens the nerves, which govern and give tone to every part of the body. The tiniest branchings of the nerves everywhe

RACING ON WHEELS

The Season for It Has About Come to an End.

ROAD RIDING TO BE RESUMED

weather this fall, members of the bicycle clubs have not indulged in much road riding, and club runs have almost been abandoned. Some riders, however, have taken advantage of the good roads and good weather, and enjoyed trips through the country. The reason the clubs have abandoned the Sunday runs is the fact that the fast riders have participated in so many races, and when they were out getting in condition other members were with them acting as pace makers or giving encouragement to the racers by their presence. The racing season will soon be brought to a close, and then the country runs will probably be resumed unless the weather proves too bad for road riding. Even a downfall of snow loss not always prevent a country run, for two years ago the Arlington Wheelmen broke the record in this respect and made a picturesque run through a blinding storm to the Great Falls and crossed the river on the ice, going to Dickey's, on the Virginia side, and some photographs of the falls were taken and are now in possession of the club as a reminder of the memorable trip. Several members of the Capital Bicycle Club have kept on the road all summer and have not missed more than two Sundays on their outings.

The Recent 20-Mile Race. The club members are still talking of the Higham twenty-mile road race, which took place over the Conduit road Tuesday afternoon, as printed in Wednesday's Star. This was the first affair of its kind held here. The idea of an annual road race of this kind was suggested by Harry High-am, the cycle rider and dealer, and the first one was so successful that the future races will undoubtedly attract more out-siders and make the race more interesting. The weather was all that could be desired Tuesday afternoon and the road was in fine condition, so that there was no reason why the affair should not have been successful. Handicapper Merrihew had arranged the handicpas satisfactorily to all the riders, so that there was no complaint to make. At exactly 3 o'clock, forty wheelmen took their places and started off in the direction of the Anglers' Club house, which was the ten-mile terminus point. At the start the riders went off in several bunches and soon they were rect. point. At the start the riders went off in several bunches and soon they were scattered all along the road. It was evident to some of the riders before the first mile was ridden that they were not in the race and they dropped out. At various stages of the race some of the riders gave up trying and thirteen in all, failed to cross the cape. On the return trip the racers came down the home stretch in a bunch and it appeared to the spectators that the came down the home stretch in a bunch and it appeared to the spectators that the timers would have some trouble in determining who crossed the tape first. C. E. Gause of the Washington Road Club managed to cross the tape a few inches ahead of F. N. Mudd of the Arlington Wheelmen, and he was declared the winner. J. J. Fister of the Georgetown Cycle Club came in third.

In third.

In the evening the wheelmen assembled in the club house of the Georgetown Club, on M street, and heard the announcements, accompanied by the prizes. Capt. Cook welcomed the guests in an appropriate speech, and then made a number of presentation speeches. The prizes were distributed as follows:

After the prizes were awarded the party enjoyed a smoker, and the affair ended with three cheers for Harry Higham and the Georgetown Cycle Club. The Indoor Entertainment Season.

The opening of the fall and winter entertainment season of the Capital Bi. Club was inaugurated Saturday night, when a largely attended stag smoker was given. The club house has been put in order for the winter, and the many noticeable improvements makes the club house more attractive than ever. Those who contributed to the entertainment features of the evening were Charles Richards Dodge, president of the club, Melville Hersey, J. R. Elliott and George O'Connor,

Sunday three members of the club represented the organization on the road. Two of the riders were not in good condition for a long journey and so the third one gave them a ride to Marlboro'.

dition, and the wind might have been with-out so much force. But the absence of what might have been did not frighten this Not even were the men who were not in good riding condition frightened off. They started from the club house in good time, and rode with the wind all the way to the county seat of Prince George's county. There they had dinner, and then started for home. The high wind had dried the road and made it better, but the wind had not and made it better, but the wind had not abated, and the two tired wheelmen had to desert their iron horses several times and assist them through the sandy stretches of road. With the numerous delays the wheelmen got home all right, and they were not on the road more than three hours. The next time they will ride when there is not a high wind.

Washington Road Club.

Members of the committee appointed to find a suitable home for the Washington Road Club have not yet made its report to the club. President Bennett is deeply interested in this matter, for he realizes the necessity of a home to keep the wheelmen together this winter. It is thought that suitable quarters will be secured before many days have elapsed, and President Bennett has made arrangements for furnishing the house care Bennett has made arrangements for furnishing the house as soon as the committee's labors are finished. When the house is furnished a club smoker will be held to inaugurate the winter season, and later the club will determine upon an entertainment

FOOT BALL LEAGUE DISBANDS.

Lack of Patronage Ends the Professional Season.

The first season of the American League of Professional Foot Ball Clubs came to an unexpected close Saturday. At a meeting held in New York on Thursday last the directors of the league decided to bring the season to a close, as the games were not supported by the public. Only seventeen games were played in the brief professional season of 1894. On Saturday the schedule called for games between Baltimore and Washington at Washington, Philadelphia and Boston at Philadelphia and New York and Brooklyn at New York.

The New York game was not played.
Boston defeated Philadelphia 5 goals to 2, and, as stated, the Baltimores defeated the Washingtons at Washington by 3 goals to 0. This leaves the championship record for the season of 1894 as follows:

FROUDE, THE HISTORIAN.

Voluminous Writer With Powers Unimpaired to the Last. James Anthony Froude, the English historian, whose death was announced in Saturday's Star, was educated at Oxford and gained a fellowship there. When twentysix years old he took deacon's orders, intending to enter the ministry. He was profoundly interested in the religious doubts of his time, and the first publications, which of his time, and the first publications, which were works of fletion, had a theological cast. His "Nemesis of Faith" raised a storm of alarm among the orthodox charchmen. Mr. Froude avowed for himself the radical sentiments expressed by his hero, and abandoned the cierical profession forthwith for hierature.

Hie became a writer of history, of discussions in political and ethical philosophy and literary criticism. After some years of magazine work he published, in 1856, the first two volumes of "The history of England from the Fail of Wolsey to the Death of Elizabeth." The third and fourth volumes appeared in 1858, the fifth and sixth in 1856. These brought the history to the death of Queen Mary. Six more volumes have since been published. Mr. Froude was one of the most voluminous writers of the period, and his just published "Life and Letters of Erasmus" shows him to have kept his fine powers unimpaired to the last.
